I have five years of tutoring, classroom, and mental health/special education experience. Over the course of those years, I have worked with children of various ages, of all academic levels, and with additional support needs. I am passionate about working with students to develop the skills needed to excel. My approach focuses on meeting students where they are, helping them foster a love of learning, and creating educational relationships built on mutual trust and respect. I graduated with two bachelors' degrees from St. Olaf College and obtained a master's degree from University College Dublin. I am currently completing a master's degree in clinical mental health counseling from The College of William & Mary. In my free time, I love to spoil my three cats, read, and travel. In addition to the United States, I have lived in three countries – Northern Ireland, Ireland, and Spain – and have traveled in twenty-three additional countries.
